Like other books in this innovative series, Teaching Online contains three parts. Part A helps you get started as an on-line tutor. It contains an extensive overview of the range of tools available, such as 'chatware' and shared whiteboards. The long, central Part B includes practical teaching ideas grouped in five chapters including 'listening and speaking', and 'reading and writing'. There are many engaging ideas, such as 'Wiki city' and 'My favourite podcast'. Part C looks specifically at Teacher Development, covering forums and blogs. This book is best used alongside a practical guide to the specific learning platform you choose. It is user-friendly and packed with accessible teaching ideas from approachable experts.
